The Tri-State Section of the American College of Surgeons will meet in Oakland on April 25 and 26, 1931.

Postgraduate Course, San Francisco Heart Committee of the San Francisco County Medical Society. The San Francisco Heart Committee which was organized in January 1930, with Dr. William J. Kerr as chairman, has just completed an interesting postgraduate course on heart disease. This course was given without fee and was arranged by the subcommittee on Education and Publicity, of which Dr. John P. Strickler is chairman. There was a total attendance of 356 doctors, and sixty-five cities of California were represented in this number. Many expressions of appreciation for the course were received from the registrants, and it is the hope of the committee to offer a similar course each year.

Tuesday, December 9, the clinic was held at University of California Hospital, Dr. William J. Kerr presiding; Wednesday, December 10, Stanford University Hospital under Dr. Arthur L. Bloomfield, and on Thursday, December 11, Letterman General Hospital, the Presidio, Major W. C. Munly, M. D., presiding.

Meeting of Pacific Coast Surgical Association.—The coming meeting of the Pacific Coast Surgical Association will convene on February 27 and 28, 1931, at Victoria, B. C.

Dr. P. J. Hanzlik, professor of pharmacology in the Stanford University School of Medicine, San Francisco, gave a series of lectures in southern California from December 16 to 19. The series included lectures on bismuth compounds in antisyphilitic therapy, metallothrapy of edema, intravenous therapy, and colloidal dyes in intoxications and will be delivered before the San Diego Academy of Medicine, Long Beach Academy of Medicine and Galen Club, and Los Angeles Hewlett Club.

The New York Polyclinic Medical School and Hospital opened its new private pavilion and operating rooms December 29 and 30. The appointments of Dr. George D. Stewart as consulting surgeon and Doctors Evan Evans, Orrin S. Wightman and C. N. B. Camac as consulting physicians to the hospital have been announced.

Former Hooper Foundation Director Receives Prize.—Dr. George H. Whipple, who was director of the Hooper Foundation for Medical Research in the Medical School of the University of California from 1914 to 1921 was recently honored by being selected to receive part of the annual award of the Popular Science Monthly for the current advancement of science to the greatest benefit of the public. The award was given for the effective service rendered in the treatment of pernicious anemia.

EXCERPTS FROM OUR STATE MEDICAL JOURNAL

Vol. IV, No. 1, January 1906

From some editorial notes:

A Nice Business.—The business of making nostrums and foisting them upon the medical profession first, and in that way upon the people later, is a particularly nice, clean, and honorable one—perhaps. At any rate it is an extensive calling, and represents the investment of a good deal of capital in—shall we say, fraud? Believing that some of our members possibly do not see as many medical journals as come through our office, we have taken the liberty of reproducing some of their advertising pages so that you may see for yourselves what sort of valuable and beneficent products are presented to the medical profession—a profession that is supposed to be made up of educated, thinking men. . . .

. . . Explain to your friends and patients that practically every newspaper in the United States is a silent partner in the nostrum fraud business. That it is bound to silence and to aid in defrauding the people into using alcoholic nostrums by the following clauses in its advertising contracts with the nostrum trust:

First: It is agreed in case any law or laws are enacted, either state or national, harmful to the interests of the ———, that this contract may be cancelled by them from date of such enactment, and the insertions paid for pro rata with the contract price. . . .

From an article by Doctor McCormack of Kentucky on Organization of the Medical Profession:

Most of the meetings of county medical societies in the past, and many at the present time, are not of very great value. In too many instances the proceedings will be about as follows: A summary of minutes will be read, and then Doctor Blank will be called upon to read a paper. This is liable to be upon the treatment of typhoid fever, proper management of labor, or, if it is in the spring, on the summer diarrhea of infants. The paper is made up of extracts from some long-since antiquated textbook, and both it and the author should have had several new editions brought out to bring it up to date. After the paper is read there will be a profound silence, until the presiding officer states that the paper is now before the society and calls upon Doctor X to open the discussion. Doctor X arises and his discussion is apt to be about as follows: "Mr. President and fellow members, I fear that I have not been so regular an attendant at the meetings of our county society in the past as I should have been. But when I listen to such an excellent paper as has been presented to us tonight by Doctor Blank, I feel that I shall be more regular in the future. Doctor Blank has presented such a masterly paper and has placed the information so clearly before you that there seems to me to be nothing left that I can add to what he has said. I will therefore ask you to excuse me and call upon some other member, who may possibly be able to add to the subject under discussion." That sort of a meeting is almost enough to make any studious and
